Johnny Heisman

On Saturday December 8th, Johnny Manziel, quarterback of the Texas A&M Aggies, became the first freshman to win the Heisman trophy. The Heisman trophy is given out to who is voted by the Heisman committee as the best player in college football. Not only was Manziel the first freshman to win the award but he was also the second player from Texas A&M to win the award. Manziel received more votes than Notre Dame linebacker Manti Te'o who finished in second and Kansas State quarterback Colin Klein who finished in third. Te'o would have been the second defensive player to win the award. Colin Klein would have been the first player to bring home the Heisman trophy from Kansas State. Manziel has become a sensation around the country earning the name "Johnny Football".

Johnny Manziel has become a fan favorite. One boy in Texas even had a picture of Johnny and the name "Johnny Football" shaved into his head. Johnny has earned the hype and the award. While you can argue that a freshman should not win the award Manziel has earned a spot in history with his outstanding play, he could do it all. He excelled in all the qualities a college football coach looks for. Manziel didn't turn it over often, he made perfect throws, and he was extremely mobile making it hard for defenses to scheme for him. Now for the rest of his life Johnny Manziel's will forever be associated the name Heisman trophy winner. A fitting finish for a very talented young man.
